

Walter grew up without his dad. When Walter received a college football scholarship, his dad came out of the woodworks and wanted to meet him. At 18 years old, Walter met his dad for the first time, only to find out that his dad had lived minutes from him for 18 years but never bothered to introduce himself. Walter's life story is a love story of sorts. He met his wife at the laundromat when he was 8 years old and told his mother he might marry her. A few years later, they were high school sweethearts and would marry after college. He not only gained a wife, but he gained a wonderful father-in-law who would become a pivotal father figure in his life. Walter wants all fatherless young men to know that God has prepared someone to fill the gap. They just have to find them. Later in life, Walter's birth father was struck by a car and would later die, but not before God gave Walter an opportunity to be in the room with his dying dad and introduce him to the grace and mercy of Jesus Christ.

My Dad Lived Close. Nobody Told Me.
